January 2008

GraceNotes from Nancy Kay Grace

January is a time when we get overloaded with ads and TV segments on weight loss, eating right, getting fit, etc. It's also a time when we see annoying commercials for "must have" products to make life go smoother or be cleaner in the new year. There are over 1400 "As Seen On TV" products. And now, with email telemarketing, there are countless more messages about products to make life...better.

However, here are some inventions that probably will not make it:

- The waterproof towel
- Glow in the dark sunglasses
- A book on how to read
- Inflatable dartboards
- Mechanical pencil sharpeners
- Waterproof tea bags.

Nope, those plans for products just won't succeed, no matter how flashy the marketing.

Gizmos and gadgets promise to make life smoother for us. Sometimes they do, sometimes they are more trouble than they are worth. Here are some reliable predictions for 2008:

- The Bible will still have answers.
- Prayer will still work.
- The Holy Sprit will still move.
- God will still inhabit the praises of His people.
- This will still be God-anointed preaching.
- There will still be singing of praise.
- God will still pour out blessings on His people.
- There will still be room at the Cross.
- Jesus will still love you.
- Jesus will still save the lost.
